Pursuant to a congressional request, GAO provided information on materiel management practices at the Naval Aviation Depots, focusing on depots: (1) efforts to minimize excess inventories; and (2) compliance with instructions prohibiting unrecorded inventory accumulation. GAO found that: (1) from 1987 to 1991, depots maintained large excess materiel inventories totalling 138 million; (2) in 1991, 64 million in excess inventory was eliminated, but the remaining excess inventory totalled 40 million; (3) excess materiel is returned to the wholesale supply system, but 22 million was sent for disposal; (4) reasons for the accumulation of excess inventories include imprecise forecasting, equipment configuration changes, forecasting and ordering errors, untimely packaging and return of materiel to wholesale level or disposal, low value of unused parts, a lack of recoverable credit for unneeded parts, and undisciplined management practices; (5) Navy efforts to control excess inventories center upon extraordinary expense writeoffs and implementation of an automated system to limit ordering and increase managers access to excess materiel; (6) unrecorded materiel that was ready to use totalled 3 million, and materiel that could have filled outstanding orders totalled...
