Their main object is to gain a reading knowledge of the language. A method adapted to such pupils should take into account the attainments they have already made and the limitations of time under which a crowded curriculum places them. This book has been prepared with the needs of these maturer students constantly in mind. The authors have endeavored to solve some of the problems with which they are confronted in the midst of their daily work with such pupils. A satisfactory solution has been sought by presenting and illustrating so much of the grammar, and only so much, as is essential to a complete reading mastery of French. In the method of presentation, practical class-room considerations have everywhere been kept uppermost. The material is...
