

HIV Interventions: Biomedicine and the Traffic Between Information and Flesh

By Marsha Rosengarten

University of Washington Press. Paperback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, HIV Interventions: Biomedicine and the Traffic Between Information and Flesh, Marsha Rosengarten, HIV has changed in the presence of recent biomedical technologies. In particular, the development of anti-retro viral therapies (ARVs) for the treatment of HIV was a significant landmark in the history of the disease. Treatment with ARV drug regimens, which began in 1996, has enabled many thousands to live with the human immunodeficiency virus without progressing to AIDS. Yet ARVs have also been fraught with problems of regimen compliance, viral resistance, and iatrogenic disease. Besides intensifying the technological and ethical work of medicine, the drugs have also affected conceptions of risk and risk practices, in turn presenting new challenges for prevention. In order to fully devise safer, more effective forms of treatment, prevention, and possibly cure, Marsha Rosengarten asserts, it is essential to understand the relationship between HIV, medical technologies, and ideas about the body. HIV is an entity that constitutes and is constituted by complex material and informational environments. Recognition of this two-way traffic between the medical science of HIV and the expression of HIV provides a novel basis for devising new or supplementary modes of thinking...
