Original publisher: Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala. : Air University Press, 2005 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)315906692 Subject: Air warfare. Excerpt: . . . FAIRCHILD PAPER achieve its ends, the cause becomes political. Groups sometimes claim that they fight for other than political reasons - to rectify economic inequality, to propagate a particular bloodline, or to camouflage a religious jihad. In their attempts to establish pu-rity of purpose, however, they use these claims to sidestep the reality of the relationship between political intent and the appli-cation of power. Nearly all societies exist in a context of social, economic, reli-gious, informational, diplomatic, military, and cultural forces. Politics, for the purpose of this discussion, refers to the con-trolled and coordinated use of these forces to achieve both gen-eral and specific ends. The method of that application in peace-time is typically nonviolent. The method by which these forces are applied in wartime, however, is not. It is violence in the pur-suit of these objectives that characterizes and confirms a military objectives political nature. One could select a different term - government, for example, or group authority - to describe the controlling force of a states various instruments of power. But forms of government and sources of authority vary widely from one society to the next. As a process of orchestrating and controlling power, politics - of which violent military power is one subset - remains re-markably identifiable regardless of the state or group in ques-tion. Politics is the motive force housed in the architecture of government or other corresponding authority. It is with this un-derstanding, and in this context, that war - the violent applica-tion of force to achieve political goals - should be weighed. Regardless of the form war takes...
